Local students enter the dark world of Macbeth

Theatre Prospero works with Frank Maddock students in two-week program

Lesley Allan
Western Review

Although some consider its title to be cursed, the powerful story of Macbeth proved to be a success for students at Frank Maddock High School as they took on one of Shakespeare's darkest and most powerful tragedies.

A complex story full of raw emotion and intense psychology, for many taking on Macbeth can prove to be an extreme challenge under normal circumstances.

For students involved with the production this challenge was even greater as they had only nine days to prepare for a public showing as part of a unique program run by Theatre Prospero out of Edmonton.

"One of the biggest challenges, especially with a play with the weight of Macbeth, is getting a teenager to understand, or even come close to understanding, what it's like to have your entire family murdered, or that blood lust revenge," shared Liz Hobbs, Associate artistic director with Theatre Prospero, prior to the showing on Mar. 14. "It's that level of emotion with people who they wouldn't normally talk to." The same goes for the rest of the school, not only am I working intensively with some kids, but we're in all these other classes who are now [aware of the play] or people will drift in and watch the sword fight rehearsal. So it gets a little bit of a buzz going on, and has the kids identifying with each other about a common interest," she adds. "The more kids involved the more there's a buzz about what's happening. Everybody gets to feel involved, or have an involved understanding of the production when it's done even if they didn't directly contribute to its creation they at least had some sort of enrichment that allows them to then watch the sword fight and say 'Oh wow that's intense. I learned hand-to-hand and that was really hard and I had like 10 more levels than what we did.' So it develops appreciation."

For those who go to work directly with the production company, this sense of appreciation was strong as they understood what kind of opportunity it was to work with the professionals. "I think it's a really extraordinary opportunity that we can have them come in because they are really good at what they do and they really know what they want from us and we know what we should expect from them," shared

Erin Whalen-Whelton, who played Lady Macbeth for the production. "They're really friendly people and it's really easy to just talk with them and be comfortable with yourself and your performance."

Part of making the students comfortable with their performance is making them comfortable with the play itself, something that's not always easy especially with the dark subjects discussed in Macbeth.

"They're doing really well, one of the challenges is really getting them to understand what it is they're saying," shared Hobbs. "They can memorize their lines, which is great, but they really still don't know what they're talking about, so we put it in ways they can relate, like how it would feel being punched in the stomach to portray the proper emotions."

This style of working with students proved to be successful once the play was performed in front of an audience, but even before that students were aware of how beneficial it was.

"I just like how they make us relate to it (the play), not the text so much, but make us comfortable with how we're [presenting] it," shared Montana Perryman.

"It's just an amazing thing for them to come out and help us learn," she continued. "We're learning so many new things and it's such a great opportunity for us to have that we wouldn't normally have."

"I like the connection, how they try to connect with us, get us to understand the text thoroughly, get us to really see it from the characters' point of view and try to get us genuinely interested in it," adds Whalen-Whelton.

With their interest engaged Whalen-Whelton and Perryman say they understand what an opportunity the workshop was but also say that it will help to benefit the local arts as a whole, not just FMHS.

"It shows what students are capable of and what we're able to do even in just two weeks because that's all they've been for, 10 days," said Whalen-Whelton. "It helps show how easy it is to be able to get something solid and amazing and put it together in such a short amount of time and I think it can draw a lot of interest from the public and be able to get more people interested."

"I think it's important for people to know that we still do have arts in our community," shared Perryman. "Maybe not a huge arts scene like you would get in Edmonton, but we still do have programs and this will help it because it's definitely given us so much more knowledge."

County carries on with divisional meetings

Two meetings remain for county's annual divisional meetings

Lesley Allan
Western Review

For the third year in a row Brazeau County has been travelling throughout the area talking to ratepayers and getting input for the 2014 budget.

Holding a meeting in each division, on March 11 administration, council, and residents gathered at the Buck Creek Community Hall to discuss county spending and address any other concerns people may have.

"I think it was well presented, done pretty well, shared Morris Mowald, one of many residents who took the time to attend the meeting. "It's probably a little better than last year's, they explained things better this time and weren't so rushed. Everything is more out in the open now than it was."

With approximately 40 ratepayers in attendance, concerns in each department were addressed and the meeting ran just over two hours.

The third meeting to have been held so far this year, councillors were very upbeat with how the meeting went with a format that had changed following the first two meetings of the year, which were reported to have been highly dysfunctional and not smoothly run.

Things, it's much better. Nothing is achieved that way, it just becomes dis-harmonious, but I do believe tonight was harmonious and I'm very thankful for that."

People who attended the meeting appeared to be satisfied with the information presented and many ratepayers made sure to address issues on spending, projects, the Land Use Bylaws and more.

Happy with the questions that were asked, Thompson says that each division has unique concerns and enquiries and she encourages everyone to ask as many questions as needed in order to be satisfied as well as to be heard.

"When I was campaigning for council, people said we've never heard, nobody listens," she says. "This is a way for us to engage the public and let their voices be heard and I think that's really important, that is part of our democratic process."

Although happy with the turnout, both residents and councillors expressed concerns about certain generations not involving themselves in the process, learning more, or making their concerns heard.

"One thing I did notice is there's not a lot of young people here, mostly a lot of snow tops," said Mowald. "They're supposed to be carrying this on (younger generations), hopefully."

"We've got to get more people out and interested," added his wife Linda. "They should have a lot of say, it's their future, they've got a lot more years ahead than we will have."

Also concerned, Thompson shared that it needs to be found out how this can change and what they can do to get younger involvement.

"Maybe they don't think they actually have a voice, but they actually have a huge voice," she said. "But how do we engage them and how do we want them to become involved, because they're our future."

With two more meetings set to take place, Thompson said council and administration hope that those who have not taken the time to come out will do so and make themselves heard, not just in the divisional meetings but all county meetings.

"It's important. Get your voice out there, let people know what you think, let people know what you want and not just [at] these divisional meetings," shared Thompson. "Come to the Land Use Bylaw review and make your voice known because if you don't things are going to be written [that you might not want] so if you don't agree with them this is your opportunity to come out and make a difference."

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: Sharon Brooks, President, House of Commons
Advisory in Agriculture: Many people in urban areas don't understand agriculture and how their food is grown. They get easily caught up in the latest trends – 100-mile diets, free-range poultry, organic – and base their actions and opinions on what they hear from the general media, which does not always portray agriculture in a factual way. The industry needs to become more visible in consumer education and farmers need to speak directly of what they do, the best they can and the way we produce food in Canada.

our editorial Information on revenue sharing just that, information

One of the items on last week's joint council meeting held on Mar. 13 was a presentation from Dave Ditrick talking about ways other municipalities in the province look at revenue or tax sharing. Last year, prior to the municipal election, that topic proved to be a polarizing one for both councillors and ratepayers. A joint committee initially formed to discuss the issue between the two municipalities was dissolved when Brazeau County stepped back and said they were not interested in carrying them forward.

Last week's presentation outlined different examples of what revenue, tax or growth sharing looks like in other municipalities. Ditrick told councils that, of 65 municipalities looked at, 15 have some sort of agreement in place.

Discussion after the presentation concluded that at this point Brazeau County councillors aren't prepared to move forward with re-examining the issue. Their own counterparts noted that at any point if the discussion was to take place again it would be when both parties are ready.

Gavin Debra Josselyn noted that with the work that's been done to create a positive working relationship between the neighbouring municipalities, and with all the services and projects they are already working on jointly, the issue isn't worth pursuing and jeopardizing that.

That should be the end of it. The presentation was informative and, no matter what side of the issue residents or council ors are on, there's no harm in accumulating information.

However, the very phrase "revenue sharing" has proven to spark a five-alarm response from some councillors. At this point it's important for those opposed to the idea of revenue sharing to remember that nothing is happening on the issue.

Public interest in municipal issues is important and residents should stay informed on issues that will impact them. But last week's presentation is no reason to light the torches and dig out the pitch forks. Both municipalities made it clear nothing will be moving forward in this area right now. When and if the discussion does happen it's not something either side will be able to take lightly, or that would be decided quickly. Just as last week's presentation was simply informational, any discussion that happens in the future will start as just that, a discussion. Discussion is not a decision.

It's also worth noting that, although there's a vocal group of ratepayers vehemently opposed to the idea of revenue sharing, there are also residents who sit on the other end of the spectrum and believe the eventual amalgamation of the two municipalities would make the most sense.

Neither of these schools of thought are ones that councils would be able to discuss without intense public scrutiny, as it should be.

But it was made clear last week that the time for that discussion isn't now, and residents should resist accordingly.

Trash talk

There and Back
Courtney Whalen

The last few weeks of warmer temperatures and sunshine has made me believe that spring is finally on the way. I'm merrily skipping forward ignoring the almost certainty of at least one more snowfall before I can completely put away my snow boots. This weather inspires people to get outside more and traffic on area sidewalks and walking paths is increasing.

The one downside of this time of year is that as snow melts it reveals what's been hidden underneath and it's not very pretty. Some of the things coming to the surface, such as grass still brown and covered in snow mould, or gravel left behind from winter sanding of roads, is unavoidable. It doesn't inspire a person to pen sonnets, but the knowledge that eventually things will start to green up and street sweepers will be out and about.

But then there's the other ugly of spring — heaps of garbage that have been covered and hidden for months are now being revealed, and it's disgusting.

Littering is one of those things that is so nonsensical it defies or someone when, at the conclusion of dumping a case of Twisted Tea and some snacks, left the evidence behind. I don't really do garbage. I don't consider myself that squeaky clean about many things, but garbage and the inevitable garbage pail that accompanies it turns my stomach. I spent the whole time I was picking it up muttering angrily under my breath and vaguely frightened that I might be getting every trace of my stink on it.

When I have an empty container or piece of garbage I will let it ride around in my pocket or car for months before I would consider throwing it out on the ground. Now I don't consider myself a person of a higher stature than other normal and reasonable human beings. I have to assume most of you out there are the same. Most of you probably also spend a large part of what you were hoping would be an enjoyable and relaxing venture into the outdoors building a growing rant at every piece of garbage you see.

I'm not sure what the solution is. Littering is disgusting. Should we start a Facebook page in a day or two, to live in Drayton Valley and I park like an idiot?

The ups and downs of brothers

What's It Like Having an older brother? People always ask me, "What's it like having an older brother?" and my answer never changes.

Having an older brother is like having a personal police force at your fingertips. As great as it sounds to constantly have someone breathing down your back, watching every single movement you make, it isn't always satisfactory. When I have a bad day and I want to just be alone, I have someone hovering over asking me an insane amount of questions trying to get me to cough up whatever was grinding my gears.

More often than not I find him believing that he is the boss of me. I will ask my mom if

In My Opinion
Brittney Gaudet

I can go hang out with a friend and before my mom can have a thought pass through her brain my brother is already asking the four Ws. Where are you going? What are you doing? When will you be back? Why do you want to hangout with them?

The fact that I am the younger sibling doesn't make the matter any better. Suddenly, as soon as mom is out of ear's reach he is flying across the room towards me with a fist headed in my direction, if by chance we get caught, the act obviously becomes my plan.

On the bright side, if I ever want to get into maid service any time in my future, my brother will be responsible for ALL of my training.

If I'm upset, I always have a personal comic act show up right in front of me. As much as I hate having him constantly tormenting me, I do enjoy having someone that I know no matter what will always be there for me, even if they drive me crazy.

Around the water cooler...

No preamble this week, we're diving right in.

The two (slightly) belated birthday wishes we want to pass on need no preamble anyway. We hope that luck was with both Kelly Stone and Sheldon Fusco, who celebrated that greatest of days, Mar. 17. We know you'll both have a fantastic year ahead. How could you not after getting the best of starts with wishes from us here at the Western Review?

The Western Review had some very special visitors last week when Connor and Chloe McDermott popped in to spread some random acts of kindness by dropping off flowers and charming all of those in the office. We hear we weren't the only ones to get a little boost to our day. Thanks so much for your thoughtfulness you two!

Last Friday reporter Lenley Allen came back to the office highly impressed with the work done by FMHS students who took on the challenging play Macbeth as part of a program with the visiting arts education program. Congratulations to the thespians, stage crew, technical wizards, costume and make up crew and everyone else who was involved.

We also want to send some big kudos out to those involved with the Community Scholarship Trust Society. The lovely group, which raises funds to distribute scholarships to all graduating students heading to post-secondary education in Drayton Valley, Brazeau County and the Village of Breton, held its annual fundraising gala last weekend. They aren't ones to blow their own horns, but they provide a great service to our local youth. We hope the 'fund' went well!

Now time for a bit of a community service announcement. The warm weather is melting away all the snow and we're in that in-between time when everything is looking a little bit worse for the long-term. It's also unweaving all the refuse that people were too lazy to throw in the trash. This is a good time of year to remind people that littering is... well, it's disgusting. If you're out and about in the next week and see some garbage, consider picking it up and putting it where it belongs.

Also, although it's still quite a ways away, mark May 8 on your calendar. That's the day Operation Clean Sweep sees volunteers don gloves and arm themselves with garbage bags to help make the community look spick and span for the coming summer.

That's it for us this week. You know how to reach us if you have a birthday or anniversary wish you want us to share. E-mail courtney.whalen@sunnmedia.ca or call 780-542-5380. Have a super spring-like week!

Learning is one of those things that is so comical that it defies any sort of justification or excuse. There's no logical reason why a person should take a chocolate bar wrapper or coffee cup or fast food container and simply drop it on the ground. The only possible explanation is that they are morons. I absolutely believe that even if the town lined every path with garbage cans so close together they were touching, we would still see garbage on the ground.

It's usually left to more civically minded people to pick up what others have left behind. It's not a problem isolated to one area of the community, it's everywhere. Just last weekend I got fed up with the trash that had been left in our office parking lot by someone or someone who, at the conclusion of dumping a case of Twisted Tea and some snacks, left the evidence behind. I don't really do garbage. I don't consider myself that squeaky clean about many things, but the trash and the inevitable garbage jar that accompanies it turns my stomach. I spent the whole time I was picking it up muttering angrily under my breath and vaguely frightened that I might be getting every leech of leechy stink it's possible to get.

opinion Love covers a multitude of miles

On Monday last week, I received nine minutes of anticipation as I warmly welcomed the newest addition to our family. Like some children, we did not find out the sex of the baby prior to its birth, and with four boys already at home, it was a surprise. When the baby finally came, we made our way to the hospital for our planned C-section with anticipation. Regretless of what sex of the baby, what we wanted more than anything was for the baby to be healthy.

At 11:25 a.m. we welcomed our new baby and fifth boy, Lachlan Paul, into our family and it brought tears and smiles to the faces of both proud parents as we held our new child in our arms. Shortly after the surgery, my wife was moved to the recovery room and it was here that she stayed for an extended period.

During her stay in recovery, her blood pressure began to drop and the medical teams spend several hours trying to do what ever they could to stabilize her. It took nearly three hours before she was deemed stable enough to be moved to a room.

I spent several further hours with my wife and baby as they continued to treat my wife medially. I later that day I headed back to Drayton valley to share with my other sons the news of their new baby brother. However, about a half-way from Edmonton to home I received a phone call from my wife. She asked me to call her parents and friends and ask them to pray for her. She said she wasn't doing well (which I knew for my wife was not good). She explained that her blood pressure was very low, her core temperature had plummeted and was experiencing dizziness and vomiting and that the doctors seemed concerned.

I got off the phone and unsure who to call, I decided Facebook was a good place to start. With most of our family in other parts of Canada and England I knew Facebook would be a good place to communicate. I made the request online and continued to drive home as quick as I could.

Mental Health matters

When I began to call our families and our friends here in Drayton but to my dismay found out that many had already read my post and were already praying and sending well wishes. I posted up my children and it was still later in the evening that I had a chance to go back on Facebook and check my status.

What I read brought many tears to my eyes. People from all over the world, friends and family from back in England and in Vancouver to name a few, people from churches I had never met, people from different faiths and backgrounds and those that I had not seen since school were praying or sending their well wishes. That evening my wife made a big recovery, her blood pressure stabilized, her body temperature rose and she was able to enjoy her first evening with her new son.

That night as I tucked my children in bed I was grateful for family and friends. That night even though I was many miles away from family and friends I felt closer to those people than ever before.

That night reminded me that we all can show love and be there for family and friends even when physically it's not possible. It was people that evening that helped to ensure that during a very stressful day I was able to stay mentally well.

That night love crossed the ocean and the mountains of Canada and knocked on my door. That night I discovered that love covers a multitude of miles.

news Drayton Valley council briefs

Courtney Whalen
Western Review

SUBDIVISION APPROVED FOR TWO PHASES
After reviewing reports from West Central Planning Agency, Town of Drayton Valley Town Councillors approved two separate subdivision applications for the Meraw Estates development.
Approval was given for Phase 5 of the development, which is to create 22 residential lots. Zoning of R4 will allow for the development of a variety of housing including detached, duplex, triplex, fourplex etc.

Councillors also approved a separate subdivision application for Phase 6, which plans to create 35 residential lots under the Meraw Estates Area Structure Plan. Lots under this plan are zoned for R1N development.

SUBDIVISION APPROVED
Approval has been given that will allow the development of 12 lots to allow to the next stage. Last week Drayton Valley councillors gave the green light for the subdivision located between 47 St. and 39 Ave. by a vote of four to two. The subdivision will allow the development of 12 lots in an existing neighbourhood.

During the referral process to adjacent landowners a number of residents were concerned about storage space for recreational vehicles.

Planning and Development Officer Claudia Dyck told councillors that open space that could be used for residents in the neighbourhood to store recreational vehicles was something discussed at a previous open house. She indicated the developer has said he will work to accommodate that need moving forward. With the subdivision application approved the developer can move to the next stage of the process, which involves applying for development permits.

UNION CONTRACT RATIFIED
With the ratification of a one-year contract with its union employees the Town of Drayton Valley and the union will be looking ahead to agreeing on a longer-term contract in the next round of negotiations.

Last week Drayton Valley councillors ratified the one year contract, which had already been approved by the union.

With some areas in need of longer discussions and negotiations the town and its union employees went ahead with the short-term contract for this year with the expectation of beginning to negotiate a three year deal this fall.

The contract includes a three per cent wage increase as well as provisions such as a $10/per day increase in standby rates and an increase to $150 per year for food allowance.

COMMITTEE CONTINUES TO WORK TO ATTRACT PHYSICIANS

Keith Warren and Pat Jeffery from the Community Physician Recruitment and Retention Committee were in council chambers last week to update council on some of the continued work the committee is doing.

With three of the municipality's 11 physicians currently not practicing due to health or other circumstances and four of the remaining physicians locums who are not in the community permanently, the committee is continuing to try and attract new doctors to the area.

Warren said the committee continues to advertise internationally and although a number of physicians have toured the community, none have chosen to settle here.

Funding of $10,500 was given to the committee by the Town of Drayton Valley with matching funds from Brazeau County approximately two years ago to assist with advertising costs.

Last week Warren was asking council to consider allowing the committee to use some of the remaining funds in other areas as they look at ways to offer support to doctors to help them get settled if they choose to practice in Drayton Valley. He also noted that Brazeau County Council recently decided to support the committee with additional funds.

Council expressed their support of the work of the committee, which they have representation on. However, Coun. Graham Long noted that since health care is a provincial responsibility council would have to discuss how they could support the committee without taking on a role the Province should be filling.

COUNCIL HEARS OF PROPOSED PROJECT

Dawn Seely was in front of town council to share information on the Almond Tree Life Centre, a proposed in residence treatment facility for men, women and families working to overcome addictions. The project is in its early stages and is just starting to form committees to look at logistics such as location, programming and specific needs. Seely told councillors that project proponents are hoping to start with a small pilot project and hope to expand in the future to become a facility with capacity for just more than 50 residents.

A fundraiser is being held this weekend where the committees will be launched and to raise funds to cover some initial costs to get the project off the ground.

Local man and his family portray the challenges and joys of mining for gold in Yukon Gold

Courtesy Whitson Western Review

Local man and his family have taken on a number of careers at his life, but when the economy slowed down a number of years ago he decided if a new opportunity presented itself he was going to go for it. It did and he did and he's spent the last five years gold mining, always keeping his family close by his side.

Johnson, his family and his crew have been battling out at 10 Mile for more than three seasons and now people are seeing him and his family on the history Channel show Yukon Gold.

A few years ago Johnson thought it would be nice if there was a way for people to see what the reality of Canadian gold mining was all about.

His son-in-law who had experience in film put something together and the video eventually ended up in the right place and the Johnsons found themselves part of Yukon Gold.

"Two or three and an interview later and they were out filming," said Johnson last week.

Johnson and his crew spend from May to October each year at 10 Mile, located 62 miles from Dawson City and accessible only by plane or boat. His fam-

It is also an integral part of the operation, whether as business partner, part of the crew, keeping camp running smoothly or being there for support. In fact, as much as the Johnsons' past is spent on Yukon Gold, show cases what it's like to run a gold mining operation. It's also about the importance of family.

"My real gold is my family," he said last week. Spending months in close quarters in the intense business of mining means that the operation crew, and now the History Channel filming crew, work and live closely together. Things don't always go smoothly and Johnson said conflicts inevitably arise. The trick is to try and handle them in a healthy way and to leave them at the work site when everybody heads to camp at the end of the day.

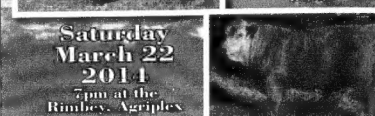

"And that's it, it gets shut off," he said, noting the family atmosphere is one of the things that gives everyone strength.

Gold mining is a high stakes

Merrifield hears from residents

Yellowhead MP holds open house

Courtesy Whalen Western Review

The topics were broad last week at an open house in Drayton Valley held by Yellowhead MP Rob Merrifield.

Merrifield was on a rapid fire tour of the constituency, and even into Rocky Mountain House that won't be part of Yellowhead until the next election, last week. It was a tiring stretch, but the long days were worth it in getting a chance to hear from residents across Yellowhead, he said.

"I'm here trying to get their pulse," he said last week. "It's really critical in this."

Interested residents headed to the curling club lounge last Wednesday night to hear Merrifield touch on the issues he works closely on in the area of international trade globally and in the United States as well as answer their questions.

"I do want to be as honest and as genuine as I can," he told those in attendance.

But on the heels of a new trade agreement with South Korea Merrifield told those assembled of the importance of trade agreements have for the country, but especially when it comes to the industries that thrive in Yellowhead.

Work done to foster and lock down trade agreements is one of the reasons why Canada has continued to weather economic difficulties better than the United States, he said.

He also made note of the ways the Conservative government has reduced taxes, both on the corporate and personal side. He followed that with a prediction.

"We're going to be debt free by this time next year, I predict, unless something catastrophic happens."

After recent reports that the RCMP had reclassified Swiss Arms rifles to a prohibited weapon, Merrifield informed the crowd that in addition to the amnesty he Happen government has extended to existing owners of the weapons, they would be looking at ways to ensure a similar situation doesn't come up in the future.

Merrifield

Local resident Mardi Daney questioned Merrifield on the Temporary Foreign Worker Program and the bureaucracy she's encountered while trying to navigate it.

Noting the program had been made more lenient in the past, opening it up to abuse and resulting in it reverting back to a more stringent process, Merrifield said changes in the existing program are expected to be announced next month, although he didn't share any details.

At the conclusion of the formal meeting Merrifield chatted to attendees on one fielding more questions.

With a busy schedule that allows him little time for the opportunity to talk directly to his constituents, he said the open houses are important because they help inform residents that he shares many of the same issues and concerns they do.

It's also a chance to share some of the work he's doing in the United States and internationally that keeps him out of the constituency so often. Although it can be hectic Merrifield said the work he's helping do will have direct impacts on Yellowhead and the industries here.

Once he wrapped up his four days of meetings, the MP said he will take what he heard back to Ottawa to include in discussions with his colleagues.

Merrifield said he encourages anyone with questions to contact his constituency office to allow staff to try and assist them.

"We can get specifics and we can get answers," he said.

To stay up to date on what Merrifield is doing in Ottawa and abroad and for contact information go online to www.merrifieldmp.com.

ATTENTION LANDOWNERS WITHIN ASPENVIEW AND SURROUNDING AREA

This is a public notice advising landowners in the above area that the Council of the Town of Drayton Valley has received applications to amend the Aspenview Area Structure Plan and to rezone a portion of the lands legally described as NE 9-49-7-W5M which would change the land use to allow the creation of medium density residential development.

Council gave first reading to Bylaws No. 2013/19/D and 2013/20/D at its Regular Meeting of Council on December 11, 2013 to amend the Area Structure Plan and rezone the land described as:

EXCEPTING THEREOUT ALL MINES AND MINERALS

FROM: R1A - Low Density Residential District
TO: DC - Direct Control District

as highlighted on the accompanying map.

Copies of the Bylaws may be examined at the Civic Centre during regular business hours. Public Hearings for these Bylaws will be held before the Regular Scheduled Meeting of Council, in the Council Chambers at the Drayton Valley Civic Centre, at 9:00am on April 2, 2014, for the purpose of hearing any objections, recommendations and/or complaints pertaining to the proposed amendments.

Objections should be submitted in writing prior to the hearing. Those written submissions which have been received before the designated time will be discussed at the meeting before further presentation will be recognized.

COUNTY ASKS FOR TOTAL COST OF
THEATRE PROJECT

Braceau County Councilors would like to see an updated cost to complete renovations on the Brazeau Pickup Arts Centre, currently working to complete Phase 1 of renovations, which includes the new stage (already completed), new washrooms and work on the lobby, the project has run into some challenges, said Annette Driesen, director of community services with the Town of Drayton Valley. The town is the project manager on the renovations, working with the art centre board. After running into problems including asbestos and some systems like HVAC coming in over the estimated budget, the project is in need of an additional $300,000 to complete Phase 1.

Prior to making any decisions about potential funding for the project to augment the grant donations, Town of Drayton Valley and previous county contributions, Reeve Pat Vos asked to have an estimate of the total cost to complete not just Phase 1, but the entire scope of the project.

COUNCILORS NOT PREPARED TO REVISIT
REVENUE SHARING

At the conclusion of a presentation outlining different examples of revenue sharing in the province, Brazeau County and Drayton Valley Councilors agreed they weren't prepared to revisit the issue at this point. The presentation by consultant Dave Dietrich noted that out of 16 municipalities looked at 15 had of arrangements that involved some sort of sharing, whether through grants, sharing of a portion of taxation, or sharing costs and revenues of new growth.

"I don't think we're in the position to have this conversation," said Brazeau County Coun. Rita Mott, noting it was still good information to have.

Coun. Anthony Henrich added that the county had already heard from many of its ratepayers on how they feel about the issue.

Town council agreed it isn't a conversation to be taken lightly. "Any conversation has to be on the basis of equality," noted Mayor Glenn McLean.

"If we want to move forward it has to be at a time when we're all ready to come to the table, and it must be consensual," added Coun. Debra Rossert. She noted she didn't want to lose any of the positive steps the two municipalities had made on their working relationship.

HOUSING COMMITTEE
LOOKS FOR NEW MANDATE

With the Housing Condition Index completed and accepted as information by both municipalities, the joint committee was looking for a new mandate last week to allow them to move forward and look at the next steps, including researching the formation of a local housing authority.

"We feel this is the most strategic way to move forward," said Wanda Compton, manager of economic development and communications for Brazeau County.

Coun. Dean Shuler said he wanted to see some timelines and targets set out.

"We've been at it for a number of years now and we need to move on it," he said. "I'd like to see something by 2016." Once the new mandate is set, the committee and administrative support will look at different models used in other municipalities and bring back more information, hopefully by June.

Raising funds to build homes

Annual HHH hockey tournament set to hit the ice Mar. 28-30

Brittney Gaudet
Special to the Western Review

Once again Drayton Valley will be celebrating the annual Humans Helping Humans Hockey tournament fundraiser from March 28-30.

Humans Helping Humans is a foundation that builds homes for families in need of affordable housing. The goal of the foundation is for all families in Drayton Valley to work together as humans helping humans. It all got started in December, 2008. In 2008 they raised more than $215,000 and completed its first build and in 2010 the foundation started its second build. The third build was completed in 2012 and the foundation's dreams are to raise enough money with the support of the community to build another home.

"The purpose of this foundation is to raise funds to build another home," said tournament organizer Amy Newberry. "The money raised will be spent on appliances needed for the home."

This year the tournament jerseys will be the same colours as the Junior World hockey team, but hockey won't be the only event at the fundraiser. "The event is a three-day long hockey tournament that will have a shot hole for the public to use with a chance to win a car from Stetson Motors," said Newberry. "As well as a silent auction, a banquet and the band Punch Drunk Cabaret."

Punch Drunk Cabaret is a rockabilly, outlaw country, and stompunk swing band. Punch Drunk Cabaret got its unique name by taking each of the three styles of music they produce and putting them together.

It feels good to be involved in a fundraiser for a worthy cause.

— Randy Bailler,
Punch Drunk Cabaret

"Our music isn't one style. It's three that we mixed together," said frontman Randy Bailler last week. "And we were looking for a name to suit all three styles." The band has three members, drummer Reverend Robin D. Eklund, bandmeister Randy Bailler and bass player Terry Saw Jones Grant. The 80s rockabilly band Stay Cuts has been their biggest inspiration on their unique style of music, said Bailler. Established in the Edmonton area, Punch Drunk Cabaret has a close connection to Drayton Valley.

Bailler's mom was also into creating music and her dreams started in Drayton Valley, where she attended Frank Maddock High School. "I'm super excited to be coming to Drayton Valley," said Bailler of returning to where his mom started playing. "A lot of family are coming to the show. In a way it's like a strange homecoming."

The connection that the band has with Drayton Valley isn't the only thing that motivated the band to attend this event.

"It feels good to be involved in a fundraiser for a worthy cause," said Bailler. Beyond the connection the band has with Drayton Valley they are also known for another special feature — their bass guitar has 12 strings.

"The 12 string bass guitar is very odd, you don't really see them," said Bailler. "It gives off a thunderous sound. It makes sense to have the bass and rhythm all in one instrument. It makes it sound like we have more than three guys on stage." Tickets for this year's fundraiser can be purchased by calling Newberry at 780-515-8951. ### Local basketball players dominate the court

Lesley Allan Western Review

Local high schools did the area proud as they dominated the court and took the top three spots during the North Central ASAA 1a zones tournament hosted by Breton High School. Running from Mar. 14 to 15, the two-day tournament featured teams from across the region and saw the Grand Trunk Tiddies from Evansburg take the top spot, followed by the Holy Trinity Tigers in second, and the Breton Cougars in third. The Tiddies, garnering the gold medal and 1a championship banner, will now look to Provincials.

HOLY TRINITY ACADEMY

Thank you to the NET team for leading the Grade 9 Retreat last week. The students had a wonderful experience and returned renewed.

All Grade 10 and Grade 11 students will be attending their one day retreat at Camp 116 Ho-Ha today (Mar. 18). The retreat will be led by the NET team who have been working in our parish since September 2013.

There will be a Grad parent meeting on Mar. 30 at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Mar. 25 will be grad photo makes. Please contact the office if you missed having your grad photo taken or require a make-up.

Mar. 28 is a day in lieu for staff and students, marking the beginning of Spring Break, which runs from Mar. 31 to Apr. 6. Classes will resume Apr. 7.

School Council meeting will be Apr. 8 at 7 p.m. in the library annex room. Please plan on attending.

Please look for mid-term reports cards Apr. 15. Holy Trinity Academy staff and students are eagerly anticipating attending a performance of Romeo and Juliet at the Citadel Theatre on Apr. 17.

Parent/teacher interviews will be held on Mar. 25 — watch for more information from classroom teachers.

Our annual Spelling Bee and Race of Champions will be held in your child's portfolio on Mar. 20. Each grade has specific words to learn for the test and children are encouraged to ask family members and friends to sponsor them. Money raised from our Spelling Bee is used specifically for cultural events held at the school, technology and Learning Commons development and support.

On Mar. 24 and Mar. 25, Grade 5 and 6 students will be holding a bake sale in support of the Kids With Cancer Society (<http://www.kidswithcancer.ca>). One of our Grade 5 students explains why this group was chosen.

"I picked the Kids With Cancer because when I was in Grade 1, I cut a 1/2 inch of my hair off, and raised around $6,000. They are located in Edmonton. When I went there with my Mum the two ladies that were there were very nice and happy because of how much I raised."

You can support this worthy cause by purchasing baked goods at the school or donating online.

Call for Expression of Interest to be a Candidate for Participation in Regional Plan Review Panels

The Government of Alberta is continuing its work on developing seven regional plans under the direction of the Land-use Framework for Alberta. Each plan provides the context and guidance for land and natural resource use in each region to help achieve Alberta's long-term social and economic goals based on a foundation of good environmental management.

Regional plans are developed in consultation with Albertans and become legal instruments once approved by Cabinet. As such, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act (ALSA) includes provisions for requesting a review of a regional plan or regional plan amendment. To support this review process, the Government of Alberta is creating a standing roster of candidates from which it will select members to participate in review panels for regional plans once the plans have been implemented. The role of the panel will be to consider review requests and provide recommendations to the Government of Alberta.

Candidates from the roster will be invited to participate in panels based on the subject matter of the review and the candidate's area of expertise. Once the roster is established, candidate names will sit on the roster for between two to three years. The roster will consist of a broad range of stakeholders and as such, individuals with a background or interest in property rights, First Nations, business, environment and rural or urban interests are encouraged to apply.

For further information on candidate requirements and to submit your interest for participation in Regional Plan Review Panels, please visit the Land-use Framework website at: <http://www.landuse.alberta.ca>.

NOTEBOOK from pg. 27

Thank you to the Drayton Valley Thunder for the donation of 200 tickets for our students. The children and their families really appreciated it.

Aurora's week earned the blocks and rings program to our school. Grades 4, 5 and 6 students spent time in the gym learning the basics of the game of curling. Having Olympic gold medalists in this sport adds to the excitement of learning the game.

Last week we substitute teachers recognition week. Your willingness, as substitute teachers, to help us deliver the curriculum, sometimes on short notice, makes you an indispensable part of our school. Thank you. Report cards will be sent home this Thursday. Parent/teacher interviews are scheduled for Mar. 24 and Mar. 25. School is closed on Friday with teachers attending a professional learning day.

Parents, please come in and check for bus changing items in the lost and found boxes. All boxes will be emptied and put on display in the lobby before Spring Break. All undelivered items will be taken to the old store during the break.

Please check out our Facebook page. Search for Aurora Elementary School and look for the Aurora mascot profile picture. News is updated daily and it is becoming an essential place to keep in touch with school news and activities.

H.W. PICKUP It's a busy week for all Hardy staff, students and parents this week! Parents, report cards should have been brought home Mar. 14, so please, schedule some time for parent/teacher interviews (on Mar. 19 from 5-8 p.m., in the gym). Students will have begun their Term 3 options this Monday (Mar. 17) and are probably ready for a Friday off on Mar. 21 (PD day).

Thank you to all coaches for their time and efforts during this past basketball season. Senior play ended last weekend with Huskies providing the zone tournament. It sounds like the junior boys' team had a chance of a lifetime to watch the Harlem Globetrotters. Congratulations to both junior boys and girls in their season this year!

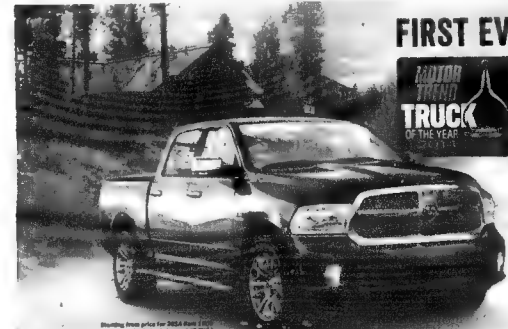

Parents are reminded that March PAC meeting will place on Mar. 26 at 7 p.m. Everyone welcome! The PAC is also looking for a casino co-ordinator ASAP please, as H.W. Pickup parents are slated to run the casino during this last quarter of the year. Anyone interested in all should contact Brandi Sauter, PAC president. Next week we are looking for ward to hopefully a warm and redful

Spring Break which begins Mar. 28 (no school) with classes resuming on Apr. 7 with a Day 1!

EL DORADO El Dorado and Drayton Christian Kindergarten classes would like to thank everybody that came to the Home Depot fundraiser. Thank you to all the parent volunteers, exhibitors and donors, who helped to make this a great success.

This month's virtue is fairness. This means to conduct yourself in an honest, straightforward manner. Let's help our children with this by showing them how fairness looks and feels to ourselves and others.

CAUSE FOR CRITTERS PET OF THE WEEK

Cagney (at right) and Lacey (at left) were rescued from Big Horn Reserve. They didn't belong to anyone and they were very hungry! They are learning "how to be dogs" — that is, how to behave like the pet! The two sisters are doing very well. Cagney and Lacey are very attached to one another so it would be good to see them go to a home together. To find out more, please contact Cause for Critters: Day 43-5450-55 St. www.causeforcritters.ca, or 780-895-7287.

Spring Bridal 2014 Planning to be big on meaning, small on price tag

It's hard to believe our wedding is only months away, where has the time gone? Obviously planning is well underway and as I attempt to get super organized things seem to be coming along smoothly. Over the last few months as I've been planning, getting items for decorations, and dealing with people, I've been asked the typical question about our theme. Not one to have a technical theme besides relaxed and casual, I always like that my theme is to spend as much money as possible. But in all honesty that isn't even close to being a joke. I have never been a big spender. I've never had an interest in name brand merchandise or having the latest and greatest trends. I thrift shop all the time. In fact the majority of stuff in my home and closet was purchased second hand, not that you'd ever guess that. I often call myself cheap, so when it came time to actually start to plan the wedding from the beginning I said something along the lines of "I'm not wanting a lot of money on one day. How many brides do you know that say that?" Now, don't get me wrong, I do not consider my wedding a waste of money, but I've never understood how people can so willingly spend a down payment on a house for one day. Yes I get that it's a very special day, and I don't judge people who want and can afford that big fancy fairy tale wedding, but it's not me. I'm cheap and I'm not fancy. Today more than ever it's as frugal brides to plan a day that they won't be paying for long after we've said our I Dos and I have tried to take advantage of them as much as possible.

Lesley's Lessons

From free wedding websites to free templates for invitations, place cards, programs and more, the Internet is the frugal brides' best friend. I've even ordered my wedding dress online, as I could not bring myself to pay dress store prices, with an inexpensive one costing $600. My dress is exactly what I want as far as how I want to feel on my special day (like a goddess), plus it was only $200, so that makes me a happy bride.

Weddings are meant to be a celebration of love and an example of who the couple is and what their life is made of. For Ben and I, having our wedding on our acreage as well as a casual party in Ontario, was the best way to honour our past future and who we are. For those just starting to plan their big day, I think it's important to sit down and decide what are the important features you want in your wedding and what is not important. For us having the opportunity to have our loved ones in our home was incredibly meaningful since we live so far away from everyone. Also, just being able to visit our evergreen field a good 1500 ft. up and finally not going on a hunt for our day.

Weddings are expensive, but don't have to cost a fortune

Spice a spectacular wedding day without spending a fortune. Although most couples shell out $50,000 to $30,000 for a one-day bash and years of debt, there are ways to cut corners and not look like cheapskates. Couples get engaged year round, and saying "I do" to terrific savings is always in season. Personalization and warmth are the keys to a memorable wedding, not the money spent, stresses Tracy Maniassou of The Wedding Planners Institute of Canada.

"It's about a connection and experience with the guests, and how they will be entertained and welcomed by the couple, not about how much a couple spends."

Here are tips for a small wedding, make a big impact, says Maniassou.

- Couples need to be heading in that special time to their wedding — a signature ring event like a sushi chef, a cigar roller, dancers or a private chef at a wedding in a home is a big right now.
- Budget-conscious brides can take these tips from premier wedding planners Maniassou and Danielle Andrews-Sunkel.
- Slip into savings — save up to 80% by purchasing last year's inventory at bridal gown stores or opt for a pre-owned one.
- Spend money to save money. Consider even a one-to-two-hour consultation session with a certified wedding co-ordinator to get names of vendors, discounts, a planning timeline to follow.
- Tie the knot off season. A winter wedding, Thursday night wedding or mid-morning wedding will save dollars.
- Even the most elaborate breakfast/brunch looks are much less expensive than a sit-down dinner, says Maniassou, adding that there's no need for as much alcohol, a band or DJ. Have a DJ/musical station or champagne and strawberries. A nice touch would be an acoustic guitar player or three-piece band for one or two songs.
- Scale back on the guest list to only close family and friends.
- Consider a venue that lets you provide your own alcohol for the bar.

• Upgrade linens, downgrade centerpieces. Upgraded linens add colour, classiness and a finished look. Complement with low vases crammed with flowers.

• Select in season, locally grown flowers. Opt for potted flowers and use them as pew markers before turning them to the reception where they can be used as centerpieces. This can save from $50 to $100 per arrangement.

• Forgo full deluxe open bar. Serve wine with dinner, a specialty drink all night, add wine and beer as options and a designated Martini bar — with one type of alcohol such as gin or vodka and a few mixers.

• Slice up savings by serving the wedding cake in dessert.

• "You save money on the catering and the big, beautiful cake doesn't get wasted," offers Sunkel.

• Forget useless favours — go for a picture frame, donation to a charity that's meaningful to the couple, or give guests something like coffee t-shirts, or mason jars.

• Cut down on decor costs by booking a venue that is already beautiful — think botanical gardens or a greenhouse.

Spring Bridal 2014

Keep it cool for your summer wedding with these tips

Don't sweat hot temperatures this wedding season

Jill Ellis
Special to DMJ Agency

Summer weddings are whimsical magical, lovely and often hot. High temperatures can result in a day of tempers, but some planning can keep the bride looking and feeling her best.

THE DRESS
If there's one item holding all the bride's hopes and dreams, it's the wedding dress, and that's a lot of pressure for one gown. If hecker's out what's available in natural fabrics may be a wise choice. Dresses in organic cotton, hemp or silk are all green options and ultimately natural fabrics breathe better than silk.

Style is important. You may want to consider a style that is not too tight, as you will be on your feet for a long time. A gown that is too tight can be uncomfortable and may even restrict your breathing.

THE HAIR
I know, the girls might clad themselves in lighter coloured linen pants and untucked shirts instead of dark suits or tuxedos.

THE HAIR
You'll get a lot of attention in the hair. If you're having a wedding in the summer, you'll want to make sure your hair is in good condition. If you're having a wedding in the summer, you'll want to make sure your hair is in good condition.

rates are higher than those of an English spring day. If your hair is curly or fine, both have a tendency to frizz — an up-do might be advisable.

UP OR DOWN
Badr advises brides to go with a classic style. You don't want to look at your picture in 10 years and ask your well. What was I thinking?

THE MAKE UP
Again, arrive at the salon with a clean face, wearing only your usual moisturizer and ensuring all eye make up is removed according to Badr.

THE MAKE UP
She recommends natural oil, sun, good quality make up, waterproof mascara and stay-on lipstick for your big day.

THE MAKE UP
Lillian Wilson Walker, a make up artist, recommends using airbrushing for the best results on a warm wedding day.

THE MAKE UP
The longevity of airbrushed foundation is much better than regular foundation in the heat, as it resists sweating.

foundation looks best in photographs and since you'll be having pictures taken all day long, this could be important.

THE MAKE UP
If you're doing your make up yourself, she recommends using mineral makeup, as it also resists sweating.

THE MAKE UP
Mineral make-up absorbs perspiration and mineral eye shadows resist creasing.

THE MAKE UP
Both Badr and Wilson Walker emphasize that having a trial run at both hair and make up a week or two before your big day is essential.

THE GUESTS
Since summer weddings often tend to be less formal, especially those held outdoors, Susan Jacobs of Personal Style Image Consulting in London, Ontario, says:

THE GUESTS
"It's always good to ask questions about the formality level. Guests want to be comfortable in the heat as well and might be tempted to wear a simple cotton sundress. Jacobs gives this the OK as long as you dress it up a bit.

If the wedding is an evening or more formal daytime event, "Accessories can step it up," she says.

THE GUESTS
For outdoor weddings, Jacobs recommends wearing wedges instead of stilettos because they are friendlier for uneven and grassy terrain. If you wear high heels, she cautions to check if you're dragging yard debris into the reception hall.

THE GUESTS
"That can be embarrassing and take down the look of your outfit."

THE GUESTS
Since the royal nuptials, hats are back in style big time and handy for shielding one from the sun during summer weddings.

THE GUESTS
Whether you are the bride, a member of the wedding party or a guest, keeping cool is important. Nina Badr says that her last wedding "was held on the hottest day of the year."

THE GUESTS
Her secret: a hand held, but very operated fan. "They're small and fit right into your clutch," she says.

Make wedding speeches memorable, in a good way

Make sure you get speeches you'll remember fondly

Linda White
Special to DM Agency

When selecting people to propose a toast at your wedding, you imagined them delivering touching and memorable speeches. But as your celebration approaches, you're worried your toast of honor will get a case of the jitters or your groom's best man will deliver a toast that makes everyone squirm in discomfort.

The pressure to deliver a moving speech can be daunting but it's also one of life's great honours. Believes Tom Halbeck, author of The Wedding MC: A Complete Guide to Success for the Master of Ceremonies. The honour begins with writing from the heart rather than finding a prepared speech online.

"There's already a lack of sincerity in canned speeches and people typically read those kinds of things word by word, which adds to the problem," says the Kananaskis author. "You don't have to be a writer or a speaker to deliver a great speech. It's more important to be sincere."

There are two extremes when delivering a speech: memorizing it word for word and taking the microphone without any notes. The best speeches aren't memorized but there are definite benefits to being well prepared. In the weeks before the wedding, jot down ideas, anecdotal stories and lines as they come to mind and you're sure to have enough material for a memorable toast.

Let your relationship with the bride and/or groom and your personality guide the tone of your speech.

"Some people are just not funny and funny can be hard. For some it's best to be sincere," says Halbeck. The bride and groom probably expect people to poke fun but this isn't a stand-up comedy routine. It has to be in good taste and humour people can relate to.

Looking for inspiration? Consider the following themes: childhood memories, how the bride and groom met, what makes them unique and why they're perfect for one another. Ask the couple if they'd like you to speak about a special theme or subject. Avoid for mal language. It's not a seminar.

If time permits, consider joining a group like Toastmasters so you can prepare your speech and get some critical feedback. Rehearse in front of one or two trusted friends, adopt a couple of their suggestions and redouble.

Halbeck suggests taking cue cards with point form notes to the podium. Leave guests waiting more by limiting your speech to three to five minutes. Take advantage of any opportunities to rehearse in the room in which you'll deliver your speech.

Avoid the temptation to calm your fears with too many drinks.

"There are better ways to deal with nervousness, one of which is to be prepared," says Halbeck. "Work out on the day of the wedding. Go for a bike ride or jog to work off some of that nervous energy."

When it comes time to deliver your toast, approach the podium confidently, stand straight with your feet shoulder width apart. Introduce yourself and explain your relationship to the bride and groom. Pronounce your words clearly and vary your rate, pitch and volume to keep the delivery lively.

Pause briefly after key points to allow guests time to absorb the information or share a laugh.

"Make eye contact with a few people. You may even want to plant a few kind eyebeams in the audience — tell your mom and friends that you're nervous and encourage them to nod their head or chuckle at your lame humour," says Halbeck. "Remember, you've got a friendly audience."

For their part, the bride and groom should ensure the people they invite to make a toast will be comfortable in the role.

"Brief them about your expectations and give them a copy of the agenda so they know when they'll be called upon to make their toast," says Halbeck. "Ask if they'd like to see the reception room in advance and ensure there's a podium with a lectern where speakers can place their notes."

There are no hard-and-fast rules about who can and can't propose a toast at your wedding but speeches are typically given by the father of the bride, groom, best man, maid of honour, bridesmaids, parents-in-law and brides. Many couples speak together and collectively thank their families and guests.

In North America, it's all about the white wedding dress, but in other parts of the world, white is not always the traditional wedding day colour. In addition to the various hues foreign brides wear, there are also a wide array of styles and fabrics. Here are just a few of our favourites that will hopefully inspire you to think outside the "white wedding gown" box on your big day.

Wedding Dresses

In Korea
In Korea the wedding ceremony is called Paejaek, and is customarily represented by the bride wearing ornate robes and headpieces. Bright colours are important as they are thought to inspire the brightness of spirit that is required at such a special event.

The bride's outfit, which is known as a hanbok, consists of a long, high-waisted skirt that wraps around the body and a long-sleeved, short jacket with two ribbons tied in a bow on the side.

Wedding Dresses

In China
The colour red is a very important colour in the traditional attire of Chinese brides. Considered a colour of luck, red is worn not only on the dress, but is also displayed in many aspects of the wedding day décor.

Traditionally in northern China the one-piece wedding dress or qipao features intricate detailing in gold and silver. In southern China, the bride wears a Qun Guo, which is a two-piece outfit decorated with a golden phoenix or dragon.

Wedding Dresses

In Africa
A traditional African bridal outfit in many parts of the continent usually consists of items made from matching fabric in bright, vivid colours, including a headpiece called a gele, a wrap skirt called an iro, a shawl called an iboran and a blouse called a buba.

These clothes are typically handmade and are one of the most expensive items in the bride's wardrobe.

Wedding Dresses

In Scotland
Traditional Scottish wedding dresses prominently feature tartans that come in a wide variety of designs and colours. Each tartan represents the clan of the family name and can be worn as a shawl, sash or trim.

Hand-stitched and embroidered knotwork is also displayed on the Scottish wedding gown. These Celtic knots symbolize eternal love and hold significant meaning.

Wedding Dresses

In Ireland
In Ireland, blue is considered good luck and is often worn as a wedding dress colour. Throughout history Irish brides have avoided wearing green, because it was thought to attract the unwanted and mischievous attention of the fairy folk.

Though an unexpected tear in a wedding gown would be considered bad luck in North America, in Ireland a rip or hole in a gown is considered a sign of good luck and a long marriage.

Wedding Dresses in India
One of the most elaborate and beautiful wedding attires is that which is worn in India. The traditional Hindu sari of wedding gown is typically worn in red and white to symbolize fertility, wealth and purity.

A few days before the wedding ceremony, the bride will have her hands and feet intricately painted with henna by women in her family. This custom is called mehndi and is a ceremonial art form that originated in ancient times.

Brides in India most often wear brightly coloured saris and have their hands decorated with mehndi.

Keep little ones entertained on your big day

Make sure young guests feel included in your special day

Carolyn McTigue
Special in DM Agency

Children at a wedding can often be as unpredictable as the weather, which is why many couples choose to have kid-free receptions. For others though, children are welcome additions to not only the overall revelry, but also the wedding ceremony itself.

Planning for their modern nature and short attention span is the only way to ensure your wedding is not only kid friendly, but also enjoyable for all your guests.

"Children often create a distraction because of boredom, so step one is to come up with a fun activity just for the children," says Kathryn Warren, a Wilton prep-based wedding planner and owner of Proposals Wedding and Event Planning. "As your ceremony, cocktail hour and wedding reception colouring sheets and crayons along with your ceremony program to families with children."

Other activities such as word searches, spot the difference puzzle, or even bags full of special goodies for them to snack on during the ceremony can help to keep children engaged and quiet during the wedding.

"At the reception consider renting a separate room and hiring child care providers to watch children during the evening," says Warren. "Many parents appreciate the opportunity to enjoy a few dance songs while the children make crafts or watch an age appropriate movie."

But for those couples on a tight budget, a few tables set up with crafts, board games, or other fun activities will help occupy children and prevent unexpected meltdowns. Though it's important to keep kids busy during a wedding, it's also important to make sure that even the littlest people attending your wedding get to enjoy some of the special festivities. "Including a special children's only dance is also a huge hit," Warren says. "Have your band or DJ play a kid friendly tune and invite all the young ones onto the dance floor to boogie. Most children love to dance and it's a great way for them to burn some energy."

Kid-Friendly Wedding Day

Have a two party in a separate room or corner of the reception hall create a special table where children can have special fruit drinks and cookies that they can decorate by themselves. Turn place mats into colouring pages and even give children disposable cameras to take pictures of the wedding with.

Have a magician or children's performer. If money allows, hiring someone to keep kids happy and entertained is always a great idea and something you'll be happy to do. A special hello. Through your day will be full of things to do and people to greet, make a point of stopping by and saying hello to your young guests. A goodie or treatable bag that has been personalized and can be handed out to each child is a wonderful way to show them that they are special and a part of your very special day.

Having children at a wedding can be very special, but make sure there are activities for them as well.

In Memoriams

Randy Kelso March 31, 1972 - March 10, 2007 "The Broken Chain"

We little knew that day, God was going to call your name. In life we loved you dearly, in death, we do the same. It broke our hearts to lose you; you did not go alone, for part of us went with you, the day God called you home. You left us beautiful memories, your love is still our guide. And though we cannot see you, you are always at our side. Our family chain is broken, and nothing seems the same, but as God calls us one by one, the chain will link again.

We love you & miss you,

In Memory of Grant MacPherson Nov. 25, 1950 - Mar. 16, 2000

If I knew it would be the last time
That I'd see you I'd tell you
I would have you in my sight
And pray the last year was the best

So if you're waiting for someone,
Why not let it be me?
For I know I would be the last time
That I'd see you, with you in my sight
And pray the last year was the best

If I knew it would be the last time
